Falls Prevention in Older People

Friday 20th September 2024
15Hatfields, London & Virtual Conference

"The world's population is ageing. Falls and related injuries are increasingly common, making their prevention and management a critical global challenge. Many falls can be prevented."

British Geriatric Society 2022

"Falls and related injuries are increasingly common, and an important driver of demand for urgent and emergency care. They can negatively affect functional independence and quality of life and, when resulting in a lie of over one hour in length, are also strongly associated with serious injuries, admission to hospital, and subsequent moves into long term care."

Going further for Winter, NHS England October 2022

"Falls are the number one single reason why older people are taking to the emergency department, and around 30% of people 65 and over will fall at least once a year. Care outside hospital is of particular importance for older people living with frailty, who are much more likely than younger people to be admitted to hospital, and likely to have a longer stay when they are admitted."

NHS England Plan for Recovering Urgent and Emergency Care January 2023

"All older adults should be advised on falls prevention and physical activity. Opportunistic case finding for falls risk is recommended for community-dwelling older adults. Those considered at high risk should be offered a comprehensive multifactorial falls risk assessment with a view to co-design and implement personalised multidomain interventions. Other recommendations cover details of assessment and intervention components and combinations, and recommendations for specific settings and populations."

The World Guidelines for Falls Prevention and Management in Older Adults 2022

"Falls and fall-related injuries, including fractures, are common and a serious health problem for older people. Falls can cause pain and injury, distress, loss of confidence and independence, or death. They are estimated to cost the NHS more than £2.3 billion per year."

National Institute for Health

"Engaging older adults is essential for prevention of falls and injuries: Understanding their beliefs, attitudes and priorities about falls and their management is critical to successfully intervening."

The World Guidelines for Falls Prevention and Management in Older Adults 2022

This conference focuses on falls prevention and management in older people with a focus on ensuring effective and resilient falls prevention activity. The conference will update delegates on the New World Guidelines for Falls Prevention and Management in Older Adults and highlight the impact of the pandemic on older people and falls prevention. Sessions throughout the day will focus on activity and falls, developing falls prevention and healthy ageing, understanding human factors in falls prevention, meeting the psychological needs of those who have fallen or are at risk of falls, improving falls education and awareness, effective personalised multidisciplinary assessment, reducing falls on the ward, falls and mental health including delirium prevention, medication management and improving secondary prevention. The conference will also discuss key elements in the reduction of falls in your service including strength, balance and exercise promotion, managing underlying health issues, developing personalised falls prevention care plans, frailty presenting as falls and improving the systems for falls monitoring, investigation and learning.

Benefits of attending:

- Network with colleagues who are working to improving falls prevention and management in older people
- Reflect on the 2022 World Guidelines for Falls Prevention
- Develop your skills and improve competence in falls prevention and management
- Improve your skills in the development of healthy ageing and effective strength and balance programmes
- Examine how a human factors approach could support you to prevent falls
- Learn from established in the development of multidisciplinary assessment and post fall protocols
- Understand how you can better meet the psychological needs of those who have fallen
- Improve falls education and awareness in older people and support people to change behaviour
- Identify and manage people at risk of falling, and effectively investigate and learn from falls when they do occur
- Improve secondary prevention of falls and fractures
- Learn from best practice in dementia, delirium prevention and falls
